

A History of Coin Dealers in the Twin Cities Area
Two sides of the Con/Coin

A Work-in-Progress 4-11-2016

Pete Smith, NWCC Historian

As a young adult living in the Twin Cities, I knew of four significant coin dealerships in the area, Continental Coin Galleries, International Coin Inc., National Coin Studio, and Northwest Territories Gold & Silver Exchange. All came to a bad end. Interesting that many of the players are still active in the business in 2016. This is my attempt to record some of the history of local coin dealers while these dealers can still share their memories.

After leaving the coin business he organized Universal Brokerage Services for a Ponzi scheme to market foreign currencies. They defrauded more than a thousand investors out of at least $190 million, called the second largest Ponzi scheme in Minnesota history.

Cook claimed that he was dealing with banks under Islamic law, or sharia, which bars interest charges. The scheme was promoted on Pat Kiley's radio program, "Follow the Money."

Cook and partners bought the historic Van Dusen mansion at 1900 LaSalle Avenue south of I-94 and downtown Minneapolis. According to court testimony, workers at the company frequently drank and smoked pot while at the office. Occasionally prostitutes were brought in for staff parties.

Cook was sentenced to 25 years in federal prison.

Fitzpatrick attended the United Nations International School in Manhattan. It was there that he first met Qubilah Shabazz, the daughter of Malcolm-X.

At age 18 he was convicted in the bombing of a Manhattan bookstore and became an informant in the planned bombing of the Egyptian tourism office. He entered the federal witness protection program and moved to Minneapolis under the name Michael Summers. He assisted the FBI with a number of cases against militant groups.

In 1993 he was arrested for cocaine possession in the apartment of his employer, Harlan Rosenfeld (1963-2000), founder of International Rarities Group.

It was alleged that Qubilah Shabazz attempted to hire Fitzpatrick to kill Louis Farrakhan. Fitzpatrick taped their phone conversations and provided the tapes to the FBI. The defense claimed entrapment.

The 1995 case against Shabazz was presided over by U. S. Magistrate Franklin Noel. Shabazz entered a guilty plea, was ordered to undergo psychological counseling and treatment for drug and alcohol abuse.

Qubilah's son Malcolm went to live with his grandmother in Yonkers. On June 1, 1997, when he was 12, he set fire to his grandmother's apartment. She died from burns three weeks later. Malcolm died of a beating in Mexico City on May 9, 2013, at age 28.
